SOMETHING TO DO

BEFORE THE FIRST PROJECT KICKS IN

A black and white line drawing of a woman's face, centered in the frame. She has large, expressive eyes and a small, closed mouth. Her right hand is raised to her lips, with her index finger pointing upwards in a universal gesture for silence or secrecy. The entire image is framed by a complex, repeating mandala pattern. The mandala consists of various geometric and organic shapes, including circles, petals, and intricate line work, creating a dense, textured background. The overall style is reminiscent of traditional Indian or Middle Eastern art, often used in coloring books or decorative posters.
